About SET

The SET, founded on March 25, 1988, is a not-for-profit technical-scientific association of engineering, technology, operations, research professionals, educational institutions and companies, that aims the dissemination of technical, operational and scientific knowledge and the improvement of the technologies of electronic audio and video media.

One of its key achievements was to head up the team that developed the Brazilian Digital TV System (SBTVD). Many countries in Latin America and Africa have adopted this system as the best solution in digital TV.

The primary objectives of SET are:

- To be a driver of technological innovation;
- To provide opportunities for professional development;
- To foster working and study groups on the trends and challenges in the market;
- To further scientific and academic knowledge;
- To support the key market players in producing regulations and standards;
- To further the development of the Brazilian electronic media market;
- To strengthen partnerships and promote opportunities with local and international associations;
