Boris Yeltsin Presidential Library is one of three national libraries of the Russian Federation. Boris Yeltsin Presidential Library is a unique center of digitization and processing of old valuable books published in Russia before the 18th century and manuscripts, that don't have copies in the world. Located in the historical building of Synod the new library represents the new era in development of library science in Russia. "This Library will become the unique intellectual resource that represents more fully the history of the Russian State at every historical stage, including the present day" – addresses the President of Russia Dmitry Anatolyevich Medvedev to the readers of the Library. The Presidential library will provide our citizens with a great opportunity to use freely its colossal volume of information, thus it will serve to strength a respectful attitude to their country and its history, and to the values of civicism and patriotism.

Etere is now working to improve and upgrade the broadcast system of the Library. The system allows to record from cameras and at the same time display a selected list of items in the large displays. Core of the system is of course a media asset management system (MAM) that also stores all the metadata needed for cataloguing the system. It can also manage a large amount of assets (assets are tapes, video files or other formats). The MAM is integrated with all the functions of the system, so it stores all the info of the media, including Videoserver storage, disk storage, Digital tape library, videotape library.

A transcoding system will also generate a frame accurate browsing copy as soon as the file is ready to be transcoded, the browsing copy is used to avoid unnecessary file transfer.

The upgrade is in progress so stay connected!
